

WESTMINSTER LEGACY FOUNDATION

You can help us connect kids with nature!

$200,000

Remember the first time you ever climbed a rock or crossed a stream? Some kids have never had an outdoor adventure, often because they live in places where they don't have access to nature. Without a fun, safe place to play outside, many kids spend their spare time glued to their phones, tablets, and computers.

Did you know the average American child between the ages of 8 and 18 spends over 7 hours of screen time each day?

The folks at the City of Westminster want to make sure that kids have a place close to home where they can connect with nature. To that end, the City is building an innovative Nature Playground at Westminster Station. This playground will be made of natural materials (trees, rocks, water, sand, blue sky, chirping birds, plenty of imagination...) The Nature Playground may be the first opportunity some local kids have ever had to really explore the outdoors. And it will be so cool that it just may make kids want to put down their phones and tablets and get outside! The Westminster Legacy Foundation has committed to raising $200,000 to help the City get the Nature Playground built. We hope you can make a donation today to help the Westminster Legacy Foundation and the City of Westminster as we work to connect kids with nature.

Here's a sneak-peek at plans for the new Westminster Station Park Nature Playground!

JESSICA RIDGEWAY
MEMORIAL PARK

WESTMINSTER

Working with the community, the Foundation raised $130,000 to help build Jessica Ridgeway Memorial Park

Grants

The Foundation has granted almost $500,000 to local organizations since 2001

Working with the community, the Foundation contributed $178,000 to the Armed Forces Tribute Garden